"NOTHING ENDURES BUT change." No, Heraclitus wasn't thinking about hotels, but the axiom applies. Condé Nast Traveler's compendium of the best hotels, resorts, and cruise lines in the world, drawn from our annual Readers' Choice Survey (see November 2010), is ever-evolving. Updated annually, it is a truly global tally of peerless travel experiences (and proves the mobility and discriminating tastes of our readers). Case in point: This year's Gold List has 48 properties appearing for the first time, and we have duly accorded each a detailed review, with readers' quotes (for complete reviews of all 2011 Gold List properties, go to cntraveler.com/goldlist, or download our soon-to-be-released iPhone or iPad app, Condé Nast Traveler's 2011 Gold List). Here's to the newcomers, and to the other hotels, resorts, and cruise lines on these pages, which have withstood the toughest test of all—time.

THE AMERICAS

"Build it and they will come" is strikingly the case along Mexico's coasts, both historic and hedonistic

MEXICO HAS ITS CHALLENGES these days, but they have not deterred the visionary development of its shorelines—the Riviera Maya on the Atlantic, the Riviera Nayarit on the Pacific—which are undergoing huge building booms. The appeal is clear: beachfront locations, easy access from the United States (most of these resorts are within an hour's drive of the international airports of Cancún or Puerto Vallarta), and hotel brands that cater to the luxe market. Such growth has had a marked effect on our Gold List: Six resorts on the Yucatán Peninsula and the Riviera Nayarit debut this year.

The stucco buildings of Maroma, on the Riviera Maya, were crafted on a former coconut plantation. Its oceanfront location scores 98.6.

 A stay at this tower within Atlantis is "like living in your own paradisiacal apartment" with a kitchen, living space, and ocean views. Marble floors, sleek sofas, and chandeliers fill public spaces. Atlantis's 40 restaurants include several focusing on seafood: Try ancho chile-rubbed salmon at Mesa, conch fritters at Bimini Road. Swimming with dolphins is one of the perfect-scoring activities.

This year-old "sparkling hotel" embodies colonial Bermuda. "Fabulous views of sky and sea appear at every turn." Rooms have balconies—some with "a huge daybed"—and whimsical touches like butterfly nets. The small spa has "a shower with 18 heads." "Staff, though well intentioned, are a bit disorganized." The Point has 80-foot-long murals and serves local swordfish.

 This 500-acre resort near El Yunque rain forest has "an upscale, chic atmosphere" and "beautiful exteriors." Due to the resort's size, "you need to have transportation or the luxury of time to walk." Staff embody "the hospitality of Puerto Rico." More than 20 bars and restaurants include Blossoms, serving pan-Asian specialties. Unwind on Palomino Island, the resort's private getaway just offshore.

 The sister property of Anse Chastanet has "a setting that is spectacular," looking onto the Piton Mountains. Airy and modern accommodations have an open wall facing the sea, 20 varieties of hardwood, and "infinity pools" with iridescent tiles. The club's dinner menu "changes with the seasons," but the emphasis is on seafood. End the night with "heavenly cocktails on the Celestial Terrace." Staff take the attitude that "nothing is too much trouble."
